Did you know?

Because the state is home to Ohio Buckeye trees, Ohio is often referred to as the Buckeye State. The nickname can be traced back at least as far as 1840, when Ohioan William Henry Harrison ran for President of the United States and won. Supporters used buckeye wood to carve souvenirs supporting their candidate.

Columbus loves ice cream! Jeni's Splendid Ice Creams opened its first store in 2002 at the North Market. Jeni's is an artisan ice cream company the New York Times called "worth the drive to Ohio."

Another local favorite is Graeter's Ice Cream. Graeter's first opened in 1876 in Cincinnati, and they've been serving delicious French Pot ice cream in classic flavors ever since.

An Ohio native, Geraldine “Jerrie” Mock was a trailblazer in the field of aviation. In 1964, Mock became the first woman to fly around the world solo. She began and ended her trip at Port Columbus International Airport, flying a Cessna 180 named “Spirit of Columbus.”

NOTES

Did you know?

The NFL headquarters were based in Columbus for eight years, from 1927 to 1939. The league's first skyscraper was the 12-story Hayden Building, which is now home to the State of Ohio offices. The city also had a team in the 1920s: the Columbus Panhandles, who were the first NFL team to play another NFL team, the Detroit Herolds.
